WARANGAL, OCT 12

India's first Agri and Food business online learning platform SRiX Agri-Business Academy was launched by British Deputy High Commissioner, Hyderabad, Andrew Fleming at SR Innovation Exchange here at Warangal on Friday. The academy is an Indo-UK collaborative initiative.

SRiX which is focused on startups of Agriculture, Cleantech and IoT joined hands with Sarras Academies Ltd, a UK based company for setting up the academy. This highlights the collaboration between Telangana and UK.

Speaking on this occasion, Mr Fleming said "The digital world is transforming our lives, our societies and our economies, the countries that are determined to make the most of it will be the ones that thrive. Since UK and India share that ambition, both the nations are on course to seize the opportunities this transformative tech brings through innovative and forward-looking initiatives such as this. This initiative further strengthens the India - UK Tech partnership signed in April 2018 between Britain and India."

Sreedevi Devireddy, CEO of SR Innovation exchange said SRiX has developed an unrivalled library of Food, Agribusiness and Sustainability training modules with the help of world's experts.
